What did they serve for but to feed a sort
Of lazy Abbots, and of full-fed Friars?
They neither plough nor sow, and yet they reap
The fat of all the land, and suck the poor.

—The infant yet unborn,
Will curse the time the Abbies were pull'd down.
I pray you where is hospitality?
Where now may poor distress'd people go
For to relieve their need, or rest their bones,
When weary travel doth oppress their limbs;
And where religious men should take them in,
Shall now be kept back by a mastiff dog?

SHAKESPEAR'S Thomas Lord Cromwell.

DEDICATION.

TO GEO. ROBERTSON, Esq; F. S. A.

Dear SIR,

IN making the produce of my leisure hours public, nothing could give me so much pleasure as dedicating it to you, and acknowledging the great obligations I shall ever consider myself under, to a Gentleman, by whose kind instruction I was led to take so much pleasure in the study of Antiquities of this sort; to whose professional abilities no encomium can do justice; whose numerous works will never cease to be the admiration of all lovers of landscape painting and drawing, as long as time shall spare them.

Though Italian ruins of much greater antiquity and grandeur, than those of the following pages, have been in part the subjects of your pencil, yet, I trust, there are many among them not unworthy of it; and to have been your guide to such a one, will amply compensate me for my pains.

I remain,

Dear S I R,

Your much obliged,

Sincere friend.

JAMES MOORE.

Stamford-street;
Surry, Dec. 1, 1786.

P R E F A C E.

HAVING experienced the trouble and disappointment of seeking information on a subject totally disregarded by people in general, and frequently most so, by those who live nearest the places enquired for, I was determined to make myself master of the subject, by the assistance of Dugdale, and various other Antiquarians, &c. and having arranged and corrected them by my own observation, however incompleat this list may be, I hope it will be found useful to those Gentlemen who take pleasure in this study; to present such was my sole motive in making it public.

The deplorable state of English Antiquities will frequently disappoint the curious traveller, and, in visiting many Abbies, &c. in the following pages, he will have the mortification to find little more than their foundations, but seldom fail beholding a sweet vale, wood, and water, to recompence his trouble. The skill of our artists hath lately brought many obscure monument of the pious grandeur of antient times to light. Nothing on that subject can ever excel Herne and Byrne's Antiquities, for beauty and accuracy. I am sorry to be informed by my friend Mr. Herne, that he has doubts of a further publication than the present volume.

The Reverend Mr. Archdale's Monasticon Hibernicum, just published, is a work of great labour, and worthy the notice of any person who designs visiting that country; but it must be lamented, that in so minute an account of the lands and revenues once belonging to those Religious Houses, hardly any description is given of the present state of their venerable ruins.

The number of grand subjects I found in a tour in Scotland last year, would (had I been equally capable of such an undertaking) have given me pleasure to have added to this; but, having set an example, hope some person better able to undertake that subject will favour us with it. In this work I have confined myself to pointing out such ruins of Abbies, &c. as are at present in being by Italicks. Had I likewise specified those best worthy notice, was apprehensive the rest would be disregarded; for, however small the vestige, I scarcely ever found an unpicturesque one.

Shall conclude with observing, that having many drawings (of my much respected friend, to whom this is dedicated) highly finished in water colours, shall always be happy to shew them any Gentleman who has a taste for such mirrors of nature, as no words can convey an idea of.
